Abstract

PROBLEM TO BE SOLVED: To provide a patent technique capacity evaluation method using a visually and intuitively understandable patent technique capacity index which is easily understandable and utilized even by someone who is not an expert and which can be simplified and made inexpensive.

SOLUTION: The ratio of the number of the patents acquired by a specified patent applicant or patentee in a specified period in a specified country to the number of all patents acquired in the same period and in the same country is derived and defined as the patent technique capacity index and a graph and a chart are prepared by using the index. Thus, the patent technique capacity of the patent applicant or the patentee is evaluated.
